Clarion Ward at Cygnet Nield House is our complex personality disorder service for women. We can support women with comorbidities, such as disordered eating, self-harm and complex needs.

The service offers a phased treatment pathway which aims to help the service user understand and plan their journey through treatment. Clarion Ward focuses on the need for treatment to be collaborative with service users, taking account of individual needs, driven by multi-disciplinary understanding, support and interventions. This allows the women we support to progress through the service and increase their quality of life and functioning.

Feedback and compliments:

"I had the best care ever, and met angels on earth who helped me get through rough times. Thank you for giving me my life back."

- former service user

"This is one of the nicest hospitals I have been admitted to. Private, en-suite bedrooms which are clean and comfortable. Activities and days out are provided to encourage patients to get involved. Lovely planted garden area to spend time in." - former service user

"I have gone from the very stubborn girl who wouldn't admit to her struggles to someone now fighting her fears one bite at a time. I have recently started exposure therapy with the dietitian, alongside completing a meal journal. If someone would have said to me a few months ago to try this, I would have said no way and broke down in tears. However, with the help from the amazing team at Cygnet Nield House, I have got to a point where I'm finally taking the leap of faith." -
